to whom it may concern

Since I could think about it, the questions were with me, the questions of: What is the sense of life? What is life? What's beyond death? Why is the whole world so much in misery? Who are we, and who am I?

Then, in summer 1982 I read a book of Bhagwan and I felt at once, that now, after all years of searching I had found someone, who could give me answers.

Since this time Bhagwan is my master. He said, that there is no need to search for answers outside, the whole truth is in oneself. I didn't really understand, but I looked into myself and what I saw was chaos, darkness and fear. So I went to the Sannyas-centre in Berlin and started with therapy-groups and in this long process of coming to myself I made many experiences with myself which brought me nearer and nearer to the strange things, Bhagwan talked about.

Through these experiences I found more and more trust to him, I could open myself for him. I felt his understanding

Now in Oregon I saw him the first time, I just sat there in his presence, I waited what would happen and then I felt a wave of energy rolling over me and over all of us and suddenly I could relax and just be here. Jesus said: "Eat me and drink me and you will live." This is really true. Being in the master's energy I felt the mystery of being alive. At the seventh of July I took Sannyas and his wave of energy which I had only felt in the presence of Brahman now rolled INTO me, he filled my whole being with his energy, with his love. Now he is with me all the time. I need only to close my eyes and I feel his energy, I feel his love.

There is no need for words.

I write you this because this is my way to explain you had one can find his way to a master who doesn't talk any more.

I thank you for reading
