To Whom It may Concern;

Re; Contributions of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh to Psychiatry and Psychology

I have been asked to submit a document outlining my views on Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh's contributions to contemporary psychiatry and psychology.

A brief note on myself.; I am an associate professor of psychiatry at Albert Einstein Medical School in the Bronx in NYC, I have taught and done research in many fields of behavioral science including much ethology, anthropology, sociology and psychoanalytic psychology. My particular specialty was social psychiatry in general and family therapy in particular. I have written three books, many articles and delivered more lectures and workshops than I care to recall. (My typing still leaves much to be desired.)

In my opinion Bhagwan is the most profound and inclusive thinker I have ever come across. His views form a synthesis that includes and transcends contemporary schools of behavioral science, while somehow reconciling many of the apparent contradictions found within them. In addition to the massive corpus of thought recorded in his literally hundreds of books, the unique guidance he has provided to thousands of individual practitioners of various therapies is of enormous impact. His disciples and followers have spread his influence and views throughout the western world wherever humane psychotherapy is practiced. His teachings are beyond sect and petty school boundaries. Finally, the therapy work happening at the Rajneesh Institute for Therapy and at many centres around the world is amongst the most healing and integrating work available to persons (sannyasins and non sannyasins equally). There is no person alive (that I am aware of) who has a more profound, far reaching and beneficial effect on psychiatry and psychology than Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh.

Sincerely yours,

Andrew Ferber MD
