To whom it may concern

I am qualified as a teacher of English language and of general education. After I finished my studies at University I have been a practising teacher for 10 years, working intensely together with parents and colleagues. I was searching for alternatives and ways to bring more of freedom and flexibility into a school-life which was not always adequate to modern insights in sociology, psychology and pedagogics. One insight of my teaching period: The child's capacity to learn and grow is basically dependant on love - yet modern society cannot supply enough love because its main interest is rather in efficiency.

When I met Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh I became fascinated because he had a complete new way of facing life. His approach is that of love and meditation: understanding and meeting life from the inside not from outward as I had tried. In the four years since I became Bhagwan's disciple I experienced a transformation myself. For the last 3 1/2 years I worked intensely in the field of art and was having exhibitions and painting courses all over the world. For me Bhagwan has opened a completely new dimension of teaching and art. He is offering a healing to humanity which starts from the very roots of each human being.
