

To whom it concerns

My name is Michael Hain. I've been a journalist since 1970. For 9 years I worked with the "Westdeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung" in several places of the Ruhrdistrict in Western Germany. Since 1978 I am a freelance writer. My main interests have always been ecological and sociostructural problems of today. I have interviewed many specialists and studied the major scientific publications on these subjects. I attended many hearings and congresses concerned with the

II.

Search for solutions for the manyfold severe problems of modern society.

After long speeches the results have always been very vaguely and quite impracticable.

The final result of all my research was that - as structures are today - the collapse seems to be inevitable.

Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh faces the problems of our age with the a totally new approach.

In contrary to all the prosocialistic theoreticians he believes in the individual initiative and the consciousness of every human being.

III.

Bhagwan's ideas have the simplicity of genius. His holistic way of thinking fascinates immediately. His commune is an outstanding experiment that proves the possibility of changing earth into paradise without wars or revolutions by changing the relationship of people to each other and nature.

This way creating a social climate without crime, drug abuse and suicides.

It is obvious for everybody to see that this is working already in Rajvashpuram and many centers all over the world.

IV.

The United States of America should be proud to have a man like Bhagwan Shree Rajvash within their borders.

Faithfully yours
